

Group writing

- The students should write a joint story to show what they have understood about a studied area. It can be a historical epoch, a special environment, a phenomenon etc.
- The students work individually to come up with a person who will be included in the story. The person must be introduced to the others with name, appearance, characteristics, interests.
- When the people are presented in the group, they discuss where the story should take place. What does the place look like? What is there, etc.?
- The students then try to individually think about and come up with a plot for the story. The task is to come up with a plot that makes it possible for the group to use the knowledge they have learned in the field studied.
- The students tell about their ideas for a plot and the group decides on one which they then develop into a story.
- Alternatively each student uses the characters and the plot and writes their own story. In the latter case, it is important that the group is kept together and gives each other peer feedback.
